

Interventional treatment for pain of spinal origin

This presentation will focus on those interventional treatments for spine pain for which there is good evidence of effectiveness. Anatomy, patient selection, technique, evidence of effectiveness and safety will be covered. For some therapeutic techniques, the most important factor in selection for treatment is the response to diagnostic interventions and these interventions will also be described.